Ealing Advice Directory

Introduction to the Sixth Edition

Ealing Advice Forum has produced the Ealing Advice Directory. The sixth edition contains entries from over eighty organisations that provide advice to people in Ealing. It includes voluntary sector and community organisations, solicitors that give advice via Legal Aid and also Council agencies that offer an advice service to the public. Some organisations outside the borough that offer a service to a large number of Ealing residents have also been included.

It has been designed not only to enable members of the public to access advice services but also so that organisations or advisers can refer or signpost clients to the service most appropriate for their needs.

Information about public transport, access for disabled people, client groups and a statement from each organisation has been included wherever possible to enable people to find the agency that is best suited to their need.

The Directory is available on line where it can be regularly updated.

The Directory

The directory has been divided into three sections:

Section 1 contains voluntary sector organisations that have been accredited with the Advice Quality Standard - the Advice Service Alliance's quality assurance standard. Using one of these organisations means you can be assured of receiving quality advice that is of nationally agreed standard and which usually exceeds that. These entries all have the AQS logo in the top right hand corner and their services are normally free.

Section 2 contains voluntary sector organisations that have either not applied for the Advice Quality Standard or have not been accredited. They have been included as they provide an invaluable service to large sections or communities in Ealing. The vast majority provide a high quality service, however, as this has not been independently assessed it therefore cannot be guaranteed. Services are normally free.

Section 3 contains private solicitors firms who provide either free or low cost services using the Legal Aid scheme. You should check for eligibility and possible costs before agreeing to use their services. As these solicitors are funded by the Legal Services Commission (LSC) to provide the service they have all been assessed and accredited with the LSC Specialist Quality Mark.

How to find the most appropriate organisation for your needs - the entry for each organisation begins with its contact details. This is then followed by the Areas of Law that it gives advice in. These are listed in terms of levels of advice as defined by the Advice Quality Standard.

Information - this is a very basic form of advice and usually consists of leaflets on a particular issue. There may be someone available to help you find the relevant leaflet or direct you the centre that can provide you with the help you need.

General Help - an adviser will be able to help identify the main points of your problem, explain the options available and identify any further action you can take as well as giving basic assistance. You should be able to get help to fill in forms, writing letters or contacting another agency (eg Benefits Agency) for information.

General Help with casework - the organisation will undertake casework on your behalf, will put your case to a third party and try and persuade them to change their decision in your favour. This may include negotiation by telephone, by letter or face to face. The organisation may be able to accompany you to a formal hearing or tribunal and speak or advocate on your behalf.

Specialist Help - these organisations can provide advice on complex matters and usually offer the full range of legal services including representing you in court or a tribunal.

Accuracy of information

All the information contained within this Directory is based on returns from the organisations listed. It is accurate at the time of publication.

Organisations wishing to update or amend their entry should complete the form at the back of the directory and return it to Ealing Advice Forum.

Members of the public who find that an organisation does not offer the services listed or any other inaccuracy should contact the Ealing Advice Forum who will check the entry and amend it as necessary.

Finally and not least we would like to formally thank volunteer Carol Kilbey who put many hours over several months in updating this Directory.

Services: We are one of the country's leading bankruptcy defence lawyers with a heavy emphasis on litigation. We are a niche practice which specialises in the more complex of cases involving substantial sums. Many of our cases involve saving people's homes. We also undertake a large amount of claims against solicitors for negligence and have a fraud department that deals with assisting those who have been a victim of fraud in bringing an action, in addition to helping those who are defending fraud claims.
